The Teen Biotech Challenge

Members of the BioTech SYSTEM, a regional consortium promoting biotechnology education, have come together to organize and sponsor the Teen Biotech Challenge. This contest is a wonderful way for students and teachers to investigate current advances in biotechnology and to develop skills in web development. As members of the biotech community, we hope to raise awareness of biotech educational programs and career opportunities in our region. As we look to the future of the Teen Biotech Challenge, we hope to encourage and inspire our region's high school students to academic excellence in the sciences.

The Teen Biotech Challenge was originated as an outreach effort of the North Valley and Mountain Biotechnology Center at American River College in 2005. In 2006, founding Director of the BioTech SYSTEM, Carey Kopay, laid the groundwork for Teen Biotech Challenge to become a major educational outreach event in Northern California. Now in its third year, the contest has maintained a steady momentum, with 135 student participants from local high schools. Over $3,000 in cash and prizes will be awarded to local students and teachers at this Biotech Symposium Awards Banquet.

We would like to extend our profound thanks to the TBC2007 Event Partners, the UC Davis Biotechnology Program and the North Valley and Mountain Biotechnology Center at American River College. Their financial contributions, in addition to those generously received from the Community Sponsors make this contest possible. Thank you to our Community Sponsors for supporting biotech education in our region and to our students and teachers for participating in the contest. Last, but not least, congratulations to our student winners! Your hard work and dedication is reflected in your entries—keep up the good work!

A teacher affects eternity; he can never tell where his influence stops.
